Joint Technical Seminar on Building Information Modeling

Programme Highlight:

Building Information Modeling (BIM) has been widely adopted for building design and construction industry. However, some senior managers think BIM is only the drafting tool similar to traditional Computing Aided Design (CAD) software but in 3D presentation. Two BIM experts from different background are invited to share their real-life experience when implementing BIM in the project, this seminar would focus on: -

- Expectation Gap for the BIM Process in the industry
- Maximize the value of BIM in Project & Construction Management
- Difficulties facing when applying BIM in Private Development

Speakers:

Mr. Isaac Lee is a chartered construction professional, working as the BIM Manager and SMART Manager in Kerry Properties. He has over 10 years practical experience in strategic planning for BIM implementation, engaging in various types of projects including historical, infrastructural, commercial and residential property development.

Isaac is also a guest lecturer of the taught master programmes in The University of Hong Kong and trainer in Hong Kong Institute of Construction, dedicating in education to incubate talents continuously to accelerate the development of digital transformation in the industry.

Mr. Simon NG is the Head of BIM in China State Construction Engineering Hong Kong Ltd who leads a team to support BIM implementation across projects including development of corporate BIM standard, workflow of various BIM application, training plan, and automation tools, etc

Being awarded as the "Young BIMer of the Year 2014" award by the CIC of Hong Kong, Mr. Simon NG has extensive experience in BIM management such as modelling standard, execution plan, template, family database, skills development, training, etc.
